View from the house.

ERW WEN is only a minute from Newport Parrog, with its sands, boating, walks, dunes and estuary .

The views of the sea from the house and grounds are spectacular. Erw Wen means "Fair Acre" and it is set in about an acre of grounds. It can sleep up to 9 comfortably; smaller groups will also find it very manageable.

Newport itself is an ancient borough in the heart of the Pembrokeshire National Park, set between the Preseli Hills and the sea. There are a variety of shops as well as galleries and restaurants. The atmosphere is friendly and welcoming.

House and Environment:

The house is modern, warm and comfortable, with wonderful sea, estuary and mountain views, from both the house and the large garden. It is about 130 metres from the sea and beach, down a "no through road". As a result there is little danger from traffic for young children, though you must watch the water, especially the fast ebb and flow periods. Life revolves around the tides, and tide tables are kept in the house. At low tide you can wade across the river to the dunes and large and beautiful beach which is never crowded.

Walks and activities:

The house is located on the Pembrokeshire coastal footpath and there are walks in all directions - to Dinas Head one way, round the estuary the other (good for bird watching) or up onto the Preseli hills - said to be the source of the Blue Stone for Stonehenge. By car the whole of the Pembrokeshire peninsula is within easy reach. Boats to the islands off the coast are great fun - try Puffin watching on Skomer! Visit Pentre Ifan, the largest group of standing stones in Wales, to be found on the hills overlooking Newport. There is a National Park Information Office in Long Street, Newport, opposite the car park. In the house you will find an information binder and also brochures and leaflets.

Shopping, craft centres etc:

The centre of Newport can be reached in 15 minutes walk, or by car, and has a range of small shops, including a Spar Supermarket which is open every day from 8 am until 10 pm. There is a take-away food shop and several pubs. There is a large TESCO in Cardigan 20 minutes drive away. For a special meal try Cnapan Restaurant, East Street, Newport which is Egon Ronay recommended. Good food is also available 5 minutes walk away at Morawellon on the front at the Parrog. There are several galleries where you will find arts, crafts and pictures. In the surrounding area are many small workshops producing craft products (eg the Candle workshop at Cilgwyn.)

Sports and boating.

There are 2 tennis courts just a few minutes from the house and an 18 hole golf course on the other side of the estuary. In the garage there is a table tennis table available to guests - especially useful on wet days!

Newport also excels for water sports. It is great for sailing, canoeing and windsurfing (in the estuary or out in the bay). There is space to store boats at the house. Newport boat club is a short walk along the sea front. It accepts holiday members and is a wonderful place to have a drink and watch the sunset. Most boating takes place at high tide

Pembrokeshire Coast National Park: Predominantly coastal, the park has some of the most beautiful coastline in Europe. There are several offshore islands, the largest of which are Skomer, Skokholm, Ramsey, Grasholm and Caldey. These are internationally known for their seabird and seal populations, and the waters around Skomer make up one of only two Marine Nature Reserves in the British Isles. The coast varies from high cliffs to long open beaches. There are sheltered coves, harbours, mud flats and dunes. In contrast are the wooded slopes of the Gwaun Valley and the windswept expanse of the Preseli Hills. Welsh is widely spoken in the area although you will have no problems being understood.
